Weather

Winter (November–February): Temperatures generally range from 8°C to 25°C. Early mornings can be cold and foggy, while afternoons are pleasant. This is the best season for birdwatching, as Bharatpur attracts a large number of migratory birds from different parts of the world. Warm layers, a jacket and comfortable walking shoes are recommended for early morning birding.
Summer (March–June): Temperatures generally range from 20°C to 42°C, with April and May being particularly hot. Mornings are relatively comfortable, but afternoons can be quite warm. The sanctuary continues to support a variety of resident birds and wildlife. Light cotton clothing, a hat, sunglasses, sunscreen and sufficient drinking water are recommended.

Best Season for Birding

November to February is the best time to explore Bharatpur's Keoladeo National Park, with pleasant weather and excellent opportunities to spot migratory water birds, ducks, geese, storks, pelicans and waders. December and January are particularly rewarding for birdwatching and photography, as winter migrants arrive in large numbers.
