Weather

Winter (October–February): Winter is a comfortable season to explore Ranthambore, with cool mornings, pleasant afternoons and dry weather. Temperatures range from around 8°C to 25°C, with early mornings sometimes feeling colder. Dry vegetation and open terrain offer good visibility during safaris, while soft winter light is ideal for wildlife photography. Carry warm layers such as a fleece jacket, sweater and scarf, especially for early morning safaris.
Summer (March–June): Summer is hot and dry, with daytime temperatures often reaching 35°C to 45°C. As water becomes scarce, wildlife frequently gathers around lakes, ponds and other water sources, which can create interesting opportunities for sightings. The dry forest also becomes more open, improving visibility in some areas. For summer safaris, wear light, breathable clothing, carry a hat, sunglasses, sunscreen and sufficient drinking water. Early morning safaris are generally more comfortable before temperatures rise.

Best Season for Wildlife

October to June is ideal for exploring Ranthambore. November to February offers pleasant weather, while March to May is particularly rewarding for tiger and leopard sightings as animals gather near water sources.
