A WILD ESCAPE - GOPINATHAM
2 NIGHTS / 3 DAYS

Gopinatham is a quaint little hamlet on the border between Karnataka and Tamil Nadu. Situated in the Cauvery Wildlife Sanctuary, the camp offers amazing vistas and opportunities to enjoy Nature at its best. Look in any direction and one can see a chain of hills. A waterbody beside the camp adds to the beauty of the place. During the monsoon these dry forests turn verdant green, soothing to the eyes. While you stay at the camp, explore the forest on foot.

Weather

Winter (November–February): Winter brings cool and pleasant weather, with misty mornings and comfortable daytime temperatures. The season is ideal for wildlife safaris, birdwatching, trekking and nature photography. Early morning safaris can be chilly, so carry warm layers like a light jacket or sweater.
Summer (March–May): Summer is generally warm and dry, with temperatures rising during the daytime. As water sources become limited, wildlife may gather around available waterholes, creating good opportunities for sightings. Carry light cotton clothing, a hat, sunglasses, sunscreen and sufficient drinking water for a comfortable experience.
Monsoon (June–October): The forest turns lush and vibrant during the monsoon, with fresh greenery, misty landscapes and flowing streams. The weather can be unpredictable, with occasional heavy showers, so carry a light rain jacket, waterproof footwear and protective covers for cameras and other equipment.

Best Season for Birding and Wildlife

November to February is ideal for exploring Gopinatham, with pleasant weather and comfortable conditions for birdwatching and wildlife exploration. The cooler months offer opportunities to spot resident birds, raptors, elephants, deer and other wildlife in the surrounding forests.
March to May can also be rewarding for wildlife sightings as animals gather near water sources.
